Petitioner, Estate of Galina Filipow, and the Division of Taxation each filed an exception to the determination of the Administrative Law Judge issued on November 15, 2007. Petitioner appeared by Poe & Freireich (Harvey R. Poe, Esq., of counsel). The Division of Taxation appeared by Daniel Smirlock, Esq. (Kevin R. Law, Esq., of counsel).

Petitioner filed a brief in support of its exception. The Division of Taxation filed a brief in opposition to petitioner's exception and a brief in support of its exception. Petitioner filed a reply brief and a brief in opposition to the Division of Taxation's exception. Oral argument, at the request of both parties, was held in Troy, New York on December 17, 2008.

After reviewing the entire record in this matter, the Tax Appeals Tribunal renders the following decision.

ISSUES

I. Whether the Notice of Deficiency, dated January 23, 2006, adequately informed petitioner of the Division of Taxation's underlying legal theories and facts for its assertion of additional tax, and, if not, whether such inadequacy rendered the notice invalid.

II. Whether the moneys paid to Helen Jeffers were properly deducted by Galpow Realty as a wage expense, subsequently inuring to the benefit of petitioner, and if not, whether such amount should be characterized as a distribution to beneficiaries and treated as income distribution deductions of the estate.

III. Whether the Division of Taxation properly calculated petitioner's basis in its shares of stock of Galpow Realty.

IV. Whether the Division of Taxation properly considered the deductions for attorney, accounting and preparer's fees, real estate commissions and bank service charges taken by petitioner on its fiduciary income tax return for the fiscal year ended October 31, 2001.

V. Whether petitioner has demonstrated reasonable cause for the abatement of penalty imposed by the Division of Taxation.

FINDINGS OF FACT

We find the facts as determined by the Administrative Law Judge. These facts are set forth below.

Petitioner, the Estate of Galina Filipow (the "Estate"), was a New York State resident estate created subsequent to the death of Ms. Filipow on November 24, 1999.

This matter originated when the Division of Taxation ("Division") discovered that the Estate had failed to file a fiduciary income tax return for the year 2001. On July 6, 2004, the Division requested that the Estate forward to it a copy of the 2001 New York and federal fiduciary returns. On August 31, 2004, the Estate complied and provided New York and federal fiduciary returns for the periods November 1, 2001 to October 31, 2002 and November 1, 2003 to October 31, 2004.

The two fiduciary returns filed by the Estate led the Division to discover that other returns had not been filed, specifically those for the fiscal years ended October 31, 2000, October 31, 2001 and October 31, 2003. In November 2004, in letters addressed to the Estate and its representatives, the Division requested copies of these returns and the federal forms 1041 for the same periods. In addition, the Division requested information on the Estate, the real property owned by the decedent, sales of real property, involvement in a subchapter S corporation known as Galpow Realty, Inc., and estate beneficiary information, including New York personal income tax returns for said beneficiaries. One of the assets the Estate received from the decedent was 100 percent of the shares of Galpow Realty, Inc., a New York corporation with its principal offices located at 40 East 94th Street in New York City. For this reason, the Division closely scrutinized the income, expenses and deductions of Galpow Realty, since its income flowed through to the Estate, thereby directly impacting the Estate's income and fiduciary tax returns.

By facsimile transmission, dated November 29, 2004, and a letter, dated December 4, 2004, the Estate provided information and documents in response to the Division's request. In addition to the beneficiary information, petitioner provided a copy of the federal estate tax return (form 706), the New York Estate Tax Return (form ET 90), and some of the federal fiduciary tax returns.

By letter, dated December 27, 2004, the Division requested very specific information with respect to the fiduciary returns for the five fiscal years ended October 31, 2000, 2001, 2002, 2003 and 2004, in addition to the personal income tax returns of the executrix, the fiduciary returns for the trust created for the benefit of the beneficiaries of the Estate, wage information, and substantiating information for sales of real property held by Galpow Realty, Inc.

A meeting took place between the auditor and petitioner's representatives on January 13, 2005, and it was determined that there was not enough information to perform an audit. Due to petitioner's difficulty in retrieving records from its accountant, the Division extended the time for petitioner to produce documentation until May of 2005, but adequate documentation was never received. Over the course of the next several months, the New York State fiduciary returns for each of the fiscal years listed above were discussed on a line-by-line basis, but missing information on the incomplete returns prevented the Division from determining the tax due. The Division analyzed information sent in by petitioner with respect to entries on the fiduciary returns and requested additional information throughout the year in letters dated June 3, 2005, July 11, 2005 and October 20, 2005. Ultimately, the Division summarized the issues remaining in dispute in a letter to petitioner's representative, dated December 1, 2005.

The Division identified three fiscal years in which it found discrepancies: the years ended October 31, 2000, October 31, 2001 and October 31, 2002. For the year ended October 31, 2000, the Division rejected and recharacterized Galpow Realty's wage expense deduction because it did not find credible the fact that the executrix could receive both a commission and a salary for ostensibly doing the same job. Further, for the same reason, the Division did not accept the wage expense as ordinary and necessary. As a result, the wage expense was added to line 49 of the fiduciary return which reflected "other income" from Galpow Realty. In fact, the executrix treated the income as wages on her 2000 federal income tax return, indicating $100,000.00 in wage income from Galpow Realty.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup>Galpow's New York franchise tax return for the fiscal year ended September 30, 2000 indicated a wage expense of $72,500.00 and a deduction of $30,000.00 for the fiscal year ended December 31, 2000.

For the year ended October 31, 2000, the Division also identified what it believed was an erroneous entry for petitioner's exemption as listed on line 59 of the return and its failure to state Galpow Realty's franchise tax on line 63 in the sum of $3,248.00.

For the year ended October 31, 2001, the Division once again rejected and recharacterized Galpow Realty's wage expense, this time in the sum of $30,000.00 because it was not deemed an ordinary and necessary expense. The Division reflected its determination by modifying lines 46 and 49 of the fiduciary income tax return. It also added back Galpow Realty's franchise tax on line 63.

For the year ended October 31, 2002, the Division modified the fiduciary tax return by accounting for interest, capital gain and income that passed through from Galpow Realty and utilizing information on the New York Estate Tax Return, form ET-90, to ascertain fair market values of the real properties, choosing to ignore the adjustments to valuations of real property made by the Internal Revenue Service ("IRS") and reported in its Estate Tax Closing Letter, dated November 4, 2003. In addition, the Division added back franchise tax of Galpow Realty in the sum of $165,645.00. The Division was aware that a capital gain was claimed by Mrs. Jeffers on her 2002 federal income tax return, dated January 7, 2005. However, from the schedule D attached to the return, it was impossible for the Division to determine if the real property was the same as that included in the Division's analysis, based upon Galpow Realty documentation and included in the Statement of Fiduciary Income Tax Audit Changes. It was the Division's determination that Mrs. Jeffers's return included other property, a fact the auditor testified to at hearing.

The Division requested additional information from petitioner's representatives in the December 1, 2005 letter. Specifically, it requested information on additional properties listed in the estate tax return and information with respect to the personal tax returns of the executrix. The final paragraph of the letter directed petitioner not to make any payments and that the Division would prepare a “Statement of Audit Findings to reflect the [contents of the letter] . . . ,” and that any basis for abatement of penalties should be submitted in writing.

The Division prepared and sent to petitioner’s representative a waiver to extend the period of limitations on assessment, which extended the time for issuance of a notice of deficiency for the period November 1, 1999 through October 31, 2003 to April 15, 2007.

By letter, dated December 15, 2005, petitioner’s representatives notified the Division that all available information had been submitted and that no further waivers would be provided, thereby mandating that a notice of deficiency be issued by the Division on or before February 15, 2006, to be timely for the periods in issue.

On January 6, 2006, the Division generated a detailed, five-page form AU-251.1, Statement of Fiduciary Income Tax Audit Changes, as promised in its letter of December 1, 2005, wherein it was referred to as a “Statement of Audit Findings.” The statement set forth an explanation of the adjustments made by the Division to the fiduciary returns for each of the three years in issue and a recomputation of the tax due for each year and the applicable penalty and interest asserted. The statement also contained a “Consent to Findings” option located on the bottom of the first page which provided:

Pursuant to Section 681[f] of the Tax Law, the restrictions provided in Section 681[c] of the Tax Law are waived and consent to the assessment and collection of the above deficiency(s), together with interest thereon, as provided.

For the fiscal year November 1, 1999 through October 31, 2000, the Division disallowed the pass-through income from Galpow Realty due to its inclusion of a deduction taken by Galpow for wage expense paid to the executrix, Helen Jeffers, in the sum of $72,500.00, which the Division considered excessive and not ordinary or necessary given the history of its employment expenses and Mrs. Jeffers's simultaneous role of executrix. In fact, the New York Estate Tax Return listed commissions paid to Mrs. Jeffers in the sum of $101,601.00. The Division also made adjustments to the exemption claimed and the add-back for taxes paid by Galpow. These adjustments yielded a New York taxable income of $111,129.00, New York State tax thereon of $7,299.00, New York City tax of $4,080.00 and negligence penalty and interest. The total amount asserted was $21,066.00.

For the fiscal year November 1, 2000 through October 31, 2001, the Division once again refused to accept the pass through of income from Galpow Realty because it was computed using a wage expense deduction of $30,000.00 paid to Helen Jeffers, the executrix. Adjustments for the exemption claimed and the add-back for income taxes paid were also made to the fiduciary return for this fiscal year. All the adjustments resulted in New York taxable income to the Estate of $96,268.00, New York State tax thereon of $6,197.00, New York City tax of $3,237.00, plus negligence penalty and interest, for a total amount due of $16,167.00.

For the fiscal year November 1, 2001 through October 31, 2002, the Division included interest income and a large capital gain from Galpow Realty, which it discovered on the form K-1 issued by the corporation. The capital gain was computed using an adjusted basis in the stock of the corporation as determined by the Division. In addition, the Division allowed a pass through of a loss from Galpow and added back franchise taxes paid, as reflected on the form K-1. The resulting New York taxable income was determined to be $415,575.00, New York State tax thereon of $28,467.00, New York City tax of $15,042.00, plus negligence penalty and interest, for a total amount due of $58,231.00.

The Statement of Fiduciary Income Tax Audit Changes, form AU 251.1, was accompanied by an undated letter prepared by the auditor, and referred to in her Tax Field Audit Record next to the date "01/06/2006," where part of the entry for that date read, "Prepared cover letter for bill." The letter referenced the same case number that appeared on the audit report and Statement of Fiduciary Income Audit Changes, X-380250839, although the letter referred to the Statement as "the audit report explaining the adjustments we propose." However, the letter also referred to the "Consent to Findings" section on the bottom of the statement and correctly indicated the full amount due as stated on the statement, i.e., $95,464.00.

At the bottom of the letter, a provision stated that if petitioner disagreed with the findings, it could avail itself of the following:

We would like to offer you the opportunity to discuss the audit findings in detail. Please contact me or my supervisor, Ms. Diane R. Marzec, by January 6, 2006 for an appointment. You may also submit any additional information or documentation you would like us to consider before the conference date or date stated above, whichever is later.

The Division issued to petitioner a Notice of Deficiency, dated January 23, 2006, assessment number L-026587219-9, for the fiscal years ended October 31, 2000, October 31, 2001 and October 31, 2002, which asserted additional tax due of $64,322.00, interest of $15,460.74 and penalty of $16,256.86. On the notice, directly above a table indicating the tax, penalty and interest due was a statement that read:

Field Audit of your books and records disclosed additional tax due. Please refer to the previously issued Consent to Field Audit Adjustment.

Petitioner opted to forego a conference in the Bureau of Conciliation and Mediation Services and filed a petition with the Division of Tax Appeals on April 14, 2006.

At hearing, petitioner agreed to certain adjustments made by the Division:

a) For each of the fiscal years ended October 31, 2000 and October 31, 2001, petitioner conceded that the disallowance of the federal exemption in the amount of $400.00 was correct;

b) For the fiscal years ended October 31, 2000 and October 31, 2001, petitioner conceded that the add-back of Galpow Realty's franchise tax in the respective sums of $3,248.00 and $800.00 was correct; and

c) For the fiscal year ended October 31, 2002, petitioner conceded that the adjustment for interest from Galpow Realty in the sum of $418.00 was properly passed through to petitioner.

The Division conceded that, for the fiscal year ended October 31, 2002, of the $165,645.00 in franchise tax reported on the form K-1, $147,784.00 represented New York City franchise tax and should not have been added back to petitioner's income. Only $14,576.00 should have been added back.

For the fiscal year ended October 31, 2000, the Division conceded that it incorrectly disallowed a payment of $2,500.00 in wages to Galina Filipow prior to her death and incorrectly increased the income of the Estate by the same amount. The actual amount of disallowed wages was $100,000.00.

Petitioner deducted attorney, accountant and preparer fees in the amount of $44,002.00 and real estate commissions on property sales and bank service charges in the sum of $22,357.00 on its federal fiduciary income tax return for the fiscal year ended October 31, 2001.

Petitioner could not relate these expenses to any source documentation it provided on audit. In a letter from petitioner's representative to the Division, dated November 8, 2005, in discussing its computation of capital gain on the sale of 333 W. 56th Street and 40 E. 94th Street, it was disclosed that the statements of closing title for both sales took into account various expenses. A review of the statements provided indicated payment of legal fees and broker's commissions, leaving little doubt that they were included in the calculation of capital gain. In addition, service fees were claimed on the New York Estate Tax Return as well, with no way of verifying if they were part of the fees claimed on the federal fiduciary return for the fiscal year ended October 31, 2001. This issue had not been raised on audit and the deductions were not claimed on petitioner's returns.

THE DETERMINATION OF THE ADMINISTRATIVE LAW JUDGE

The Administrative Law Judge rejected petitioners' argument that it did not receive fair warning of the Division's theories of law and fact in the January 23, 2006 Notice of Deficiency issued to it. The Administrative Law Judge found that although the Division made some unfortunate, inarticulate descriptions, those errors did not deprive petitioner of fair warning of the Division's theories of law and fact. The Administrative Law Judge noted that regardless of the title of the form used by the Division in the Notice of Deficiency, the Statement is a summary of the adjustments made by the Division in petitioner's fiduciary income tax returns for the fiscal years in issue and an explanation of the reasons for those adjustments set forth on three separate pages, which petitioner addressed almost line by line in its petition filed with the Division of Tax Appeals on April 14, 2006. The Administrative Law Judge determined that the evidence showed that the notice adequately identified and incorporated the Statement of Fiduciary Income Tax Audit Changes, especially in the context of the audit and communications between the Division and petitioner, and the explanation of the Division's theories and reasoning underlying its adjustments. Therefore, the Administrative Law Judge rejected, as contrary to facts in the record, petitioner's claim that it was not given fair warning of the Division's theories of law and fact underlying the Notice of Deficiency.

Next, the Administrative Law Judge addressed the fact that the Division refused to recognize the wage income paid to Helen Jeffers, executrix of the Estate, by Galpow Realty in the year 2000. As a result, the wage income deduction in the sum of $100,000.00 was added back to the income of Galpow Realty and then passed through to petitioner, the sole shareholder. The basis given for the disallowance by the Division was that the wage expense paid by the corporation to the executrix of the estate was not ordinary and necessary in nature. The Administrative Law Judge noted that petitioner offered no evidence to dispute the Division's contention.

In the alternative, petitioner argued that the wages were actually a de facto distribution from the Estate, and that the Estate would have been entitled to an income distribution deduction on the payment to Mrs. Jeffers. Petitioner reasoned that since the funds were ultimately received by Mrs. Jeffers, how they were distributed was of no importance.

The Administrative Law Judge rejected this argument. In so doing, the Administrative Law Judge noted that petitioner chose the form of the transaction and it decided that Galpow Realty would pay wages to Mrs. Jeffers and deduct the sum from the company's income. It was reported by Galpow Realty to account for this payment and W-2 wage statements were issued. Mrs. Jeffers reported the income on her 2000 federal income tax return as wage income. Since the form of the transaction was chosen by petitioner, which at the time was controlled by Mrs. Jeffers, the Administrative Law Judge determined that petitioner was bound by that choice and its ramifications. The choice of form did not rest with the tax authorities but with the taxpayer. If the taxpayer chose a form that was taxable instead of an equally available form that was non-taxable, it must bear the consequences (see, Matter of North Shore Cadillac v. Tax Appeals Tribunal, 13 AD3d 994 [2004], lv denied 5 NY3d 704[2005]).

The Administrative Law Judge observed that Mrs. Jeffers, as executrix of petitioner receiving commissions for her services, had Galpow Realty pay her wages of $100,000.00. This action took the funds out of the stream of the Estate's distributable income, i.e., beyond the reach of the beneficiaries of the Estate, since it was money paid directly to Mrs. Jeffers from the corporation and never passed through to the Estate, where it would have been distributed subject to the terms of the last will and testament. Further, the funds never passed to the Estate as income and, therefore, were not subject to New York fiduciary income tax. This created a significant savings for petitioner, which only allocated a small percentage of its income to New York. The Administrative Law Judge pointed out that this created an appearance of a tax plan intended to avoid New York taxation, with absolutely no justification offered by petitioner.

Petitioner did not submit any evidence to support Galpow's payment of wages to Mrs. Jeffers and the Administrative Law Judge concluded that petitioner, therefore, had failed to demonstrate that the wages were ordinary and necessary as set forth in IRC § 162(a). Since petitioner failed to carry its burden of showing that these expenses were, in fact, for compensation for personal services actually rendered and that the payment was reasonable (Treas Reg § 1.162-7[a]), the Administrative Law Judge found that the Division properly disallowed the wage deduction and added the amount back to Galpow's income, with the resulting impact on petitioner's income. Since petitioner did not demonstrate that any of this income was actually distributed by the Estate, the Administrative Law Judge found that it was proper to assume that it was retained by petitioner and was properly taxed.

The Administrative Law Judge noted that petitioner had also failed to demonstrate that it ever intended for the wage payment to be an income distribution by the Estate to Mrs. Jeffers. In fact, the Administrative Law Judge observed, it appeared that its only reason for asserting this theory was the Division's disallowance. Therefore, the Administrative Law Judge found that this is not similar to those matters where the Division has improperly disregarded the substance of the transaction in an arbitrary and capricious exercise of its power (see, Matter of Riluc Co. v. Tax Appeals Tribunal, 169 AD2d 988 [1991]). The Administrative Law Judge observed that the Division had merely asked for substantiation of the ordinary and necessary nature of the wage payments, which petitioner was unable to provide.

Next, petitioner claimed that the Division erred in not adjusting its basis, $1,300,000.00, in the Galpow Realty stock for the fiscal year ended October 31, 2007, resulting in an inflated capital gain for that year. The critical factor involved the valuation of the Estate's real property, which had been reported to be $1,259,900.00 on the original federal estate tax return, form 706. Petitioner claimed, and the Division conceded, that the basis in the stock of Galpow Realty was adjusted during an audit of petitioner's federal estate tax return by the IRS and stated in the November 4, 2003 Estate Tax Closing Letter sent to petitioner's representative. The Division was aware that the IRS had reduced the fee of the executrix by $20,081.00 and increased the value ascribed to Galpow's real property by $101,136.00 but did not conform its audit results to accommodate for these modifications.

The Administrative Law Judge noted that Tax Law § 961(a) provides that a final federal determination as to the value of any item of property or item claimed as a deduction shall also determine the value for New York purposes unless shown by a preponderance of the evidence to be erroneous. Tax Law § 961(b) provides that a final federal determination includes a final disposition by the secretary of the treasury. Therefore, the Administrative Law Judge found that the results of the audit by the IRS, known to the Division at the time of its audit of the Estate and embodied in the Estate Tax Closing Letter, dated November 4, 2003, is binding to the extent that the value of items that comprised the basis in Galpow Realty stock were identical. The Administrative Law Judge observed that the Division did not demonstrate that the audit adjustments made by the IRS were erroneous.

Therefore, the Administrative Law Judge found that the Division's assertion of additional tax based on the lower value for Galpow's real estate was in error and that the New York Fiduciary Income Tax Return for the fiscal year ended October 31, 2002 should be modified to include the two adjustments noted by the auditor with respect to the commission of the executrix (if applicable) and the adjusted basis in the real property (see, Matter of Weaver's Estate, 97 Misc 2d 72 [1978], affd 74 AD2d 678 [1980]).

Petitioner next claimed that the capital gain assigned to petitioner by the Division was passed through to the beneficiaries and claimed on the 2002 federal personal income tax return of Helen Jeffers, dated January 7, 2005. Thus, petitioner argues, there remained no taxable income to be recognized on the New York fiduciary income tax return for the fiscal year ended October 31, 2002. However, the Administrative Law Judge noted that from the schedule D attached to the 2002 federal income tax return of Mrs. Jeffers, it is not discernible if the property sold was the same as that included in the Division's analysis in its Statement of Fiduciary Income Tax Audit Changes. In fact, the Administrative Law Judge pointed out that in answer to a question from petitioner's representative as to whether the sale of properties inherited from the estate was reflected on the 2002 1040 of Helen Jeffers, the auditor stated that "there was other property." Petitioner's representative did not follow up in an attempt to clarify this answer or correct the witness. Therefore, the Administrative Law Judge found that petitioner, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, conceded its accuracy. The Administrative Law Judge found that since petitioner offered no further evidence to prove its theory, it failed to carry its burden of proof (Tax Law § 689[e]).

Next, Petitioner claimed that the Division erred in not permitting it to deduct attorney, accountant and preparer fees in the amount of $44,002.00 and for real estate commissions on property sales and bank service charges in the sum of $22,357.00, which it had taken on its federal fiduciary income tax return for the fiscal year ended October 31, 2001. The Administrative Law Judge noted that petitioner did not claim these expenses on its New York fiduciary return for the fiscal year ended October 31, 2001. The Administrative Law Judge further noted that it is not possible to trace these expenses to any source documentation provided by petitioner during the audit. As such, the Administrative Law Judge found that petitioner did not meet its burden of proving entitlement to them, regardless of what it claimed on the federal returns for the same period.

Petitioner claimed that many of the adjustments made or omitted by the Division were contrary to the mission and vision of the agency, i.e., to provide a fair system of tax administration and add to a favorable economic climate. In reviewing this allegation, the Administrative Law Judge observed that it was evident from the record that the Division worked diligently for over 18 months to determine the correct amount of tax that was due in the context of complex factual circumstances. The audit would have been even longer except petitioner refused to waive the period of limitations on assessment after February 2006. Given the information provided, and the many communications with the taxpayer and its representatives, both oral and written, over that time period, the Administrative Law Judge rejected this claim. The Administrative Law Judge found that it was petitioner that failed to provide adequate documentation to support its positions and chose to end discussions with the Division with requests for further documentation outstanding.

Penalties were assessed based on petitioner's failure to file returns and pay its tax liability in a timely manner due to negligence or intentional disregard of the statute and regulations (Tax Law § 685[a][1];[b][1], [2]). The Administrative Law Judge noted that petitioner's only argument in support of abating the penalties is that they are not warranted because there is no tax due.

Thus, the Administrative Law Judge found that petitioner failed to demonstrate reasonable cause for its failure to file and pay the taxes due, and the imposition of penalties was sustained.

ARGUMENTS ON EXCEPTION

The Division urges that the determination of the Administrative Law Judge be affirmed, with the following exception. The Division takes exception to so much of the determination of the Administrative Law Judge as held that petitioner's deficiency should be modified to compute petitioner's capital gain using a higher basis for the corporation's stock value as determined in a final federal audit adjustment at the Estate Tax level. The Division argues that since the estate did not file an amended New York State Estate Tax Return, the auditor was justified in using the basis as reported in the original New York State Estate Tax Return under the tax benefit rule.

Petitioner disagrees and defends this conclusion of the Administrative Law Judge arguing that the Division erred in not conforming the basis in the stock of Gulp Realty with the basis determined by the Internal Revenue Service. Petitioner believes that the Division had no reason not to make the same adjustments made by the IRS in the absence of evidence that the IRS had made an error in its determination.

Petitioner takes exception to the remainder of the determination of the Administrative Law Judge, raising the same arguments as were raised below.

Petitioner contends that it was not given fair warning of the Division's theories of law and fact. It relies on the statement in the Notice of Deficiency's computation section, which indicated that a Consent to Field Audit Adjustment had been previously issued that explained the basis for the notice. Since no document with that title appears in the record, petitioner claims it was forced to guess the reasoning underlying the Division's Notice of Deficiency. In addition, petitioner cites the Division's issuance of a document entitled "Statement of Fiduciary Income Tax Audit Changes," dated January 6, 2006, as further evidence of a failure to warn petitioner of the basis for the assessment. It was forwarded to petitioner with a cover letter that invited petitioner to discuss the matter with the Division by contacting it by the same date, January 6, 2006, to arrange for an appointment, an impossibility that petitioner argues prevented it from discerning the Division's theories of law and fact underlying the assessment.

Petitioner also urges that its fiduciary income for the fiscal years ended October 31, 2000 and October 31, 2001 should not be increased, regardless of whether wages paid by Gulp Realty to Helen Jeffers were properly deductible by Gulp. Petitioner argued that the Division erred in disallowing the wages and then compounded its error by not allowing the Estate to pass the income to a beneficiary and claim an income distribution deduction therefor.

Petitioner also argues that the deductions for attorney, accounting and preparer's fees, real estate commissions and bank service charges claimed on the federal fiduciary income tax returns for the fiscal year ended October 31, 2001 should have been allowed on the New York return.

Finally, petitioner urges that there are no additional tax or penalties due from petitioner.

OPINION

We affirm the determination of the Administrative Law Judge for the reasons stated therein. Upon a thorough and complete review of this record, we find that the Administrative Law Judge has fully and correctly addressed each of the issues presented. The parties have offered no evidence below or argument on exception that would justify our modifying the determination in any respect.

Accordingly it is ORDERED, ADJUDGED and DECREED that:

1. The exception of the Estate of Galina Filipow is denied;
2. The exception of the Division of Taxation is denied;
3. The determination of the Administrative Law Judge is affirmed;
4. The petition of the Estate of Galina Filipow is granted to the extent set forth in conclusion of law "C" of the Administrative Law Judge's determination, but in all other respects is denied; and
5. The Notice of Deficiency dated January 23, 2006, in accordance with paragraph "4" above, is sustained.
