Petitioner, Parvinder Singh Salh, filed an exception to the determination of the Administrative Law Judge issued on February 25, 2010. Petitioner appeared by Justin S. White, Esq. The Division of Taxation appeared by Daniel Smirlock, Esq. (Lori P. Antolick, Esq., of counsel).

Petitioner did not file a brief in support. The Division of Taxation filed a letter brief in lieu of a formal brief in opposition. Petitioner filed a reply brief. Oral argument, at petitioner's request, was heard on September 15, 2010 in New York, New York.

After reviewing the entire record in this matter, the Tax Appeals Tribunal renders the following decision.

ISSUES

I. Whether the Division of Taxation properly determined that petitioner acquired certain assets in a bulk sale transaction from WorldWide Trading, Inc., and as a bulk sale purchaser, assumed the outstanding sales tax liabilities of that seller.

II. Whether the Division of Taxation is estopped from imposing a tax assessment greater than $3,000.00 as a result of the Division of Taxation's representations made in correspondence to petitioner concerning the amount of tax owed by WorldWide Trading, Inc.

FINDINGS OF FACT

We find the facts as determined by the Administrative Law Judge except for finding of fact "1," which has been modified. The Administrative Law Judge's findings of fact and the modified finding of fact are set forth below.

We have modified finding of fact "1" of the Administrative Law Judge's determination to read as follows:

Pursuant to an agreement dated July 16, 2006, Parvinder Singh Salh (petitioner) purchased a restaurant franchise business known as "Subway®" (Subway) located in Buffalo, New York. The seller in the transaction was Michael I. Gatas. The agreement indicated that, "As an inducement to Doctor's Associates Inc. (Franchisor) to transfer the SUBWAY® franchise from SELLER to PURCHASER, the SELLER for all dealings with Franchisor is Michael I. Gatas, as an individual." In addition, the seller represented that he had good and marketable title to the assets being transferred. The total selling price for the business was $147,500.00. Petitioner continued to operate the franchise at the same location following the purchase. The agreement apprised petitioner, and he agreed to pay as part of the purchase price, all applicable New York sales taxes due upon filing of the Bulk Sales Notification (Exhibit "I") with the Division of Taxation.¹

In connection with his purchase of the business on December 27, 2006, petitioner filed a Notification of Sale, Transfer or Assignment in Bulk, dated on that date, with the Division of Taxation (Division). Such notification, received by the Division on January 3, 2007, did not indicate the date or scheduled date of the sale, nor did it list a business or trade name. The seller's name was Michael I. Gatas. There was no mention of WorldWide Trading, Inc. (WorldWide), the company that actually operated the franchise in issue, of which Michael Gatas was an officer.

¹We have modified finding of fact "1" to clarify that petitioner was apprised of his potential liability for sales tax five months before the sale was consummated.

The Division corresponded with petitioner's representative by a letter dated January 11, 2007, referencing the Notification of Sale regarding the sale of WorldWide. The Division determined that WorldWide was the seller from the seller's certificate of authority number provided on the form.

The letter stated:

All open sales tax liabilities of the seller, Worldwide Trading Inc. can be transferred to you as the purchaser in a bulk sale, in accordance with Section 1141 (c) of the New York State Sales and Use Tax Law. Currently Worldwide Trading Inc.'s sales tax file shows open sales tax liabilities of approximately $3,000.00. We are asking for prompt payment by Worldwide Trading Inc. or payment from escrow funds which will prevent this liability from being transferred to you.

The closing statement that represented the transfer of the Subway Store Franchise #5510 listed Michael I. Gatas as the seller. An escrow agreement between petitioner and Michael I. Gatas stated as follows:

The seller has guaranteed to deliver all sales tax receipts due to [sic] the sale of products in the ordinary course of business to the New York State Department of Taxation and Finance that have been collected through midnight of December 26, 2006.

* * *

Purchaser requires an amount be held in escrow at the time of the closing to provide for any outstanding taxes due, or other expenses that are obligations of the seller that may encumber the business and its operation.

On or about January 16, 2007, petitioner's representative, Justin White, Esq., communicated with the attorney for Michael Gatas, Matthew Weber, Esq., concerning the January 11, 2007 correspondence from the Division and indicated he was working out such matters with the Division.

By correspondence dated January 19, 2007, Mr. Weber informed Mr. White that the outstanding liability of approximately $3,000.00 owed by WorldWide related to WorldWide's purchase of Subway Store #24070 from Tailamangus, Inc., in June 2006, a separate and distinct Subway store from the subject of the sale between petitioner and Mr. Gatas. In addition, in pertinent part, the correspondence indicated that the Division could not provide an exact amount of the New York State tax liability at that time connected to the store that petitioner had purchased, since the Division was waiting for the results of a current but not completed field audit.

The Division requested an amended Notification of Sale, Transfer or Assignment in Bulk and the exact date of sale in correspondence to Mr. White dated February 5, 2007. Mr. White complied and submitted the amended notice on February 16, 2007, with the single change requested, that of the date of sale of the business.

In October 2006, the Division had commenced a sales tax field audit of WorldWide for the period September 1, 2003 through December 27, 2006. A written request for books and records was sent to WorldWide on October 2, 2006, at the address of its corporate principal, Michael Gatas.

On November 2, 2006, the scheduled day of appointment, Rocco D'Aloise, a Division tax auditor assigned to the WorldWide audit, went to the Subway premises, and located Mr. Gatas. When Mr. Gatas indicated that he had not received the appointment letter, Mr. D'Aloise provided him with a copy of the letter and the records requested list and agreed to reschedule the appointment on December 5, 2006 at the business address. This meeting was canceled due to illness in Mr. Gatas's family. Thereafter, for the next couple of months, the parties exchanged phone calls but never met for the audit.

On March 13, 2007, the auditor and his team leader met with Michael Gatas and his brother Tony Gatas at the Buffalo District Office. The Division was provided with a Sales Quarterly Ledger Report, a report generated by Subway Headquarters, the franchisor, which listed the sales reported by WorldWide to the franchisor for the audit period. No other records were produced, but the parties discussed the business operations, and the Division reviewed the bulk sale information.

When the Division's auditor compared the information he received from Subway Headquarters to the sales reported by Mr. Gatas on the sales tax return, he determined that there were unreported sales of $404,121.57, resulting in additional tax due of $33,949.04, plus applicable penalty and interest. Mr. Gatas was unable to explain the discrepancy, though he indicated that he was still attempting to gather information for the auditor. The auditor proposed assessment in the amount of $53,502.08, which included the tax due of $33,949.04, plus penalties and interest, and requested that WorldWide agree or disagree with the proposed adjustment by March 30, 2007. In mid April 2007, the case was assessed as one without consent and with no payment, with WorldWide not stating a specific reason for disagreement. A Notice of Determination was issued to WorldWide dated April 30, 2007.

The Division issued to petitioner a Notice of Determination (Assessment No. L-028624750-4) dated May 25, 2007, which assessed $33,949.04 in tax due, representing the tax (only) assessed against WorldWide. The notice identified the period at issue as September 1, 2003 through December 27, 2006, and explained the assessment as follows: "This notice is issued because you are liable as a bulk sale purchaser for taxes determined to be due in accordance with Sections 1141(c) and 1138(a)(3) of the New York State Tax Law."

At some point after the issuance of the notice assessing the tax to WorldWide on the basis of the audit, a notice was also issued by the Division dated May 29, 2007 to Michael Gatas (Assessment No. L028631939-3), presumably as a responsible officer of WorldWide, which was the subject of subsequent review by the Bureau of Conciliation and Mediation Services (BCMS). At the conclusion of that process, the tax was reduced to $27,327.55, plus penalty and interest. Mr. Gatas made a payment to the Division on the bulk sale assessment, which inured to petitioner in the amount of $19,482.57.²

The Division issued to petitioner a second Notice of Determination (Assessment No. L-028624751-3) also dated May 25, 2007, which assessed $2,625.00 in tax due, plus penalties and interest, representing the tax assessed against WorldWide for the purchase of business assets from Tailamangus, Inc., in June 2006. The notice identified the period at issue as the period ended June 29, 2006, and explained the assessment as follows: “This notice is issued because you are liable as a purchaser in accordance with section 1133(b) of the New York State Tax Law, for business assets, taxable under Article 28 of the Tax Law, transferred to you as a purchaser.”

BCMS granted petitioner a conciliation conference concerning the two notices that are the subject of this matter, and it was held November 15, 2007. Petitioner’s representative received correspondence from BCMS, dated December 4, 2007, which referenced the conciliation conference, the two notices in issue, the issue of the Division’s letter of January 11, 2007 (the contents in pertinent part which are described in Finding of Fact 3), and its potential limitation on the taxes due from petitioner. The conferee further stated:

² This payment amount differs slightly from the amount shown on the Division accounts receivable system of balances, as it relates to petitioner’s assessment herein, L-028624750-4. On the accounts receivable system, the amount paid is $19,499.75. No explanation for the discrepancy was provided.

As noted by the Department's advocate at the conference, the January 11, 2007 letter contained an error in that the $3,000 figure did not include the sales taxes due by the seller of $33,949.04; the $3,000 represented only the taxes and interest due on the tangible personal property being transferred by the seller to the purchaser.

By operation of the Sales Tax Law, Parvinder Singh Sahl, as purchaser, is liable for the sales taxes due by the seller in the amount for $33,949.04. It is your argument that the Tax Department's letter dated January 11, 2007 limits the liability to $3,000. This argument is one of equitable estoppel.

* * *

In the instant matter, I must conclude that equitable estoppel is not applicable because detrimental reliance did not exist. The Bulk sale transaction took place on December 27, 2006, and this preceded the January 11, 2007 letter that contained the error. As such, Parvinder Singh Salh did not undertake the sale on December 27, 2006 with reliance on the Department's statement that his exposure for the sales taxed [sic] and interest was limited to only $3,000.

Although I must sustain the tax deficiency, penalty is being cancelled.

Conciliation Order CMS No. 219730 was issued on January 18, 2008 as to both assessments, cancelling the penalty on both.

THE DETERMINATION OF THE ADMINISTRATIVE LAW JUDGE

The Administrative Law Judge noted that under the Division's regulations, the term "bulk sale" for sales and use tax purposes is "any sale, transfer or assignment in bulk of any part or the whole of business assets, other than in the ordinary course of business, by a person required to collect tax" (20 NYCRR 537.1[a][1]). The Administrative Law Judge also pointed out that a purchaser in a bulk sale transaction becomes personally liable for the sales and use taxes that the Division claims to be due from the seller if the purchaser fails to file a proper and timely notice of bulk sale (see Tax Law § 1141[c]). The purchaser's liability is limited to the greater of the purchase price or fair market value of the business assets sold (see 20 NYCRR 537.0[c][2]). In addition to the tax due and owing, while penalty and interest from the seller does not transfer, petitioner is liable for penalty and interest accruing from the date that the notices of determination were issued against him, in this case, May 25, 2007 (see Tax Law §§ 1141[c]; 1145[a]; 20 NYCRR 537.4[e]; see also Matter of Velez v. Division of Taxation, 152 AD2d 87 [1989]).

The Administrative Law Judge further noted that, in the event of successive bulk sales, each successive purchaser acquires a derivative liability from all previous bulk sales to the seller for which an outstanding liability still exists (see 20 NYCRR 537.4[j]). Accordingly, the Administrative Law Judge found that when petitioner made a bulk sale purchase of the business assets of WorldWide, petitioner acquired a derivative liability from WorldWide with respect to sales tax claimed by the Division to be due, in the first instance, from WorldWide's purchase of tangible personal property of Tailamangus, Inc.

There is no dispute that petitioner bought the subject Subway franchise in a bulk sale transaction. Petitioner's contention, however, is that he contracted with Michael Gatas, and not WorldWide, for the sale, and consequently should not be held liable for the taxes of an entity with whom he did not have a contractual relationship.

The Administrative Law Judge found that regardless of any initial confusion by petitioner, he did purchase the business assets of WorldWide even though he initially dealt with the owner, Michael Gatas, as an individual. The bulk sale notice that notified the Division of the sale bore WorldWide's certificate of authority number and was identified by the Division as such. The Administrative Law Judge observed that if petitioner had timely notified the Division of the proposed sale, he would have been informed by the Division sooner of the corporate identity and the potential existence of unpaid taxes for which he could be held liable, and not deprived himself of the protection afforded by these provisions. The Administrative Law Judge found that petitioner would have been immediately notified by the Division, as evidenced by the correspondence dated January 11, 2007 from the Division, which estimated the seller's liability at $3,000.00. This was a separate liability precipitated by the earlier bulk sale purchase of the Subway franchise from Tailamangus, Inc., by WorldWide, which had not been satisfied. Thus, the Administrative Law Judge determined that $3,000.00 was an accurate estimate of WorldWide's then-known liability, since the audit of WorldWide for September 1, 2003 through December 27, 2006 had not been completed, despite its commencement in October 2006.

Since petitioner was a purchaser in a bulk sale transaction, the Administrative Law Judge found that he was required under Tax Law § 1141(c) to give notice of such sale to the Division at least 10 days before taking possession of or making payment for the business assets. There is no question that petitioner did not give notice to the Division as required under Tax Law § 1141(c). It was petitioner's failure to comply with the notice requirements of Tax Law § 1141(c) that exposed him to liability for sales and use taxes due from WorldWide, the bulk seller, and Tailamangus, the previous bulk seller (see 20 NYCRR 537.4[j]).

Turning to the Division's determination of additional tax due from WorldWide, the company did not produce detailed records in response to the Division's request. What the Division was able to obtain was a report generated by Subway Headquarters, the franchisor, which listed the sales reported by WorldWide to the franchisor during the audit period. This amount was significantly more than the amount reported on WorldWide's sales tax returns. The Division concluded that the sales were underreported by more than $400,000.00 and assessed sales and use tax accordingly. Consequently, the burden of proof was on petitioner to show, by clear and convincing evidence, that the result of this estimate of his liability was unreasonably inaccurate or that the amount of tax assessed was erroneous, and the Administrative Law Judge found that petitioner failed to meet this burden. The Administrative Law Judge sustained the assessment, as adjusted by BCMS and subject to payments made on the assessment.

The Administrative Law Judge rejected petitioner's argument that the Division should be estopped from assessing an amount in excess of $3,000.00 against him. Petitioner alleges that he relied upon representation in the Division's letter of January 11, 2007, that WorldWide's outstanding tax liability was estimated at approximately that amount. According to petitioner, this is the reason he did not more aggressively pursue the seller for escrow funds sufficient to protect himself.

The Administrative Law Judge noted that we have followed a three-part test in order to determine whether to invoke estoppel, as follows: (i) whether there was a right to rely on a representation made by the Division, (ii) whether there was such reliance and (iii) whether the reliance was to the detriment of the party who relied upon the representation (see Matter of Consolidated Rail Corp., Tax Appeals Tribunal, August 24, 1995, confirmed 231 AD2d 140 [1997], appeal dismissed 91 NY2d 848 [1997]; see also Matter of Harry's Exxon Serv. Sta., Tax Appeals Tribunal, December 6, 1988).

The Administrative Law Judge found that petitioner failed to establish that in making the decision to purchase, he relied upon the Division's representations and that such reliance was to his detriment. The agreement to purchase the Subway franchise was signed in July 2006, and on December 27, 2006 the sale took place. The Administrative Law Judge noted that it was not until December 27, 2006, and not before, that petitioner finally filed the bulk sale notice with the Division, after which time he learned of the outstanding liabilities of WorldWide. By January 11, 2007, when the Division corresponded with petitioner regarding the liabilities of WorldWide, the contract and its terms had already been executed. Therefore, the Administrative Law Judge found that petitioner could not have relied to his detriment upon facts in the January 11, 2007 correspondence, as he had already consummated the deal by the time he received that letter. Therefore, the Administrative Law Judge denied petitioner's request for equitable relief.

ARGUMENTS ON EXCEPTION

On exception, petitioner raises the same arguments as were raised below. Petitioner asserts that he believed he was contracting for the instant purchase from Michael Gatas, as an individual, not WorldWide Trading, Inc. According to petitioner, he was unaware of who the actual seller was, whose liability was being attributed to him, and as it was not Michael Gatas as an individual, he cannot be held liable for the tax liabilities of WorldWide Trading, Inc.

Petitioner further argues that he should be granted the remedy of equitable estoppel against the Division, since there would be manifest injustice if the principle is not applied.

The Division argues that petitioner purchased the business assets of the seller in a bulk sale under Tax Law § 1141(c) of the Tax Law. As such, petitioner is liable for the payment of any and all sales and use tax due from the seller, since petitioner failed to timely notify the Division of the transfer, as required by statute. Further, any confusion as to the identity of the seller would have been resolved at the closing of the transaction and before petitioner filed the notice of bulk sale with the Division.

The Division further argues that petitioner's argument of equitable estoppel fails, since petitioner did not detrimentally rely upon the Division's representation of tax liabilities of WorldWide at the time of the transfer of business assets. The Division points out that if petitioner, prior to purchasing the business, had timely notified the Division of his proposed transaction along with the seller's sales tax number, he would have been protected by the statute.

OPINION

Petitioner claims and argues that he detrimentally relied upon representations made by the Division in making the subject bulk sale purchase, but the record does not reflect any action or representation by the Division made prior to his purchase, on which he could have relied. As for petitioner's claim of confusion about whom he was purchasing the business from, that too is a problem of his own making and could easily have been avoided had he notified the Division prior to his purchase, along with the number on the seller's Certificate of Authority or a copy of a sales tax return for the business (which also would carry that certificate number). We note that at the time he filed the notice of bulk sale purchase with the Division, petitioner had already purchased the business. Petitioner knew at that point (before filing the bulk sale notice) that the seller was, in fact, WorldWide Trading, Inc. Despite petitioner's knowledge, he completed the purchase.

We reject petitioner's estoppel argument, because he has failed to show that the Division provided him with information that he then relied upon to his detriment in making the bulk sale purchase from WorldWide Trading, Inc. (see Matter of Moog v. Tully, 105 AD2d 982 [1984]). While petitioner may have a cause of action against others for failing to protect his interests or for attempting to conceal outstanding liabilities, we do not grant estoppel against the Division based on wrongful acts of third parties. Once the Division had been informed that petitioner purchased the business, the Division acted promptly to advise petitioner of then-known sales tax liabilities and informed petitioner's representative that an audit was being conducted of WorldWide Trading, Inc. and that additional sales tax may be owed.

We affirm the determination of the Administrative Law Judge for the reasons stated therein. We find that the Administrative Law Judge fully and completely addressed the arguments raised by petitioner. Petitioner has offered no evidence below or arguments on exception that would justify our modifying the determination in any respect.

Accordingly, it is ORDERED, ADJUDGED and DECREED that:

1. The exception of Parvinder Singh Salh is denied;
2. The determination of the Administrative Law Judge is affirmed;
3. The petition of Parvinder Singh Salh is denied;
4. The Notice of Determination dated May 25, 2007, as modified, is sustained and the Notice of Determination dated May 25, 2006, is sustained.
